THE ACHIEVER

Successful, Efficient, Motivating,
Driven, Image-conscious

“Good enough” is not a thought that enters your mind. You strive for excellence in all things turning good to great.

However, every strength left unchecked can become a liability. Your drive to be successful at all costs can cause you to lose yourself in the process. Vulnerability does not come easy as you want to maintain the successful persona most people see you as. You begin to believe that you are only your accomplishments and nothing more which affects not only you but those closest to you.

In these moments of losing yourself in your striving you are constantly comparing yourself to others becoming even more competitive, self-promoting, and image conscious. Enter the risk of burnout as you believe you are only as good as your last accomplishment.

At your worst you think, “What does a successful me look like in your eyes?”

At your best you believe, “I am successful because of who I am, not what I do.”

At your healthiest your confidence and enthusiasm is inspiring to others, you leverage this to bring out the best in those around you. You focus on others’ success over your own believing that serving a greater mission and purpose is the ultimate form of success. You use your adaptability, productivity, and drive for excellence for the greater good.

Avoids

Exposed as or thought incompetent, inefficient, worthless, failing to be or appear successful.

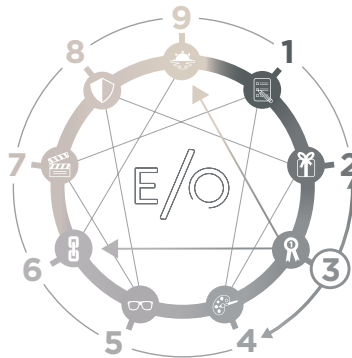

Pursues

Being respected, admired, successful, and valuable. Achieving high status and the appearance of success.

Fulfillment

Knowing you are valued for who you are.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Dominant Struggle

Self-Deceit - The Type 3 is known as the chameleon type, taking on different personas and behaviors depending on their audience to achieve success. This leads to the struggle of self-deceit and believing they are only their accomplishments or their personas. They “lose” themselves in their pursuit of success and can encounter reoccurring identity crisis.

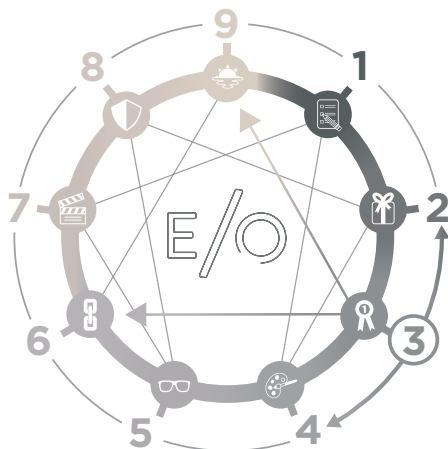

Type 3 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

 CONFIDENCE PATH How you think/behave when you are mentally/emotionally healthy Type 3 moves toward Confident side of Type 6 • Accept yourself for being more than your accomplishments. • Become more vulnerable, authentic, and cooperative. • Accept your weaknesses and leverage the strengths of others.	 INSECURITY PATH How you think/behave when mentally/emotionally stressed Type 3 moves toward Insecure side of Type 9 • Productive avoidance. Stay busy to avoid looking lazy or worthless. • Shut down, close yourself off or become apathetic and passive. • Resist help and guidance from others. • Avoid ownership of mistakes and flaws. "I know." becomes a common response.
 FAMILIAR PATH How you think/behave with those closest to you, your blind-spot Type 3 moves toward Insecure side of Type 6 • Suspicious and untrusting. • Reactive and aggressive when blamed or accused. • Share anxious thoughts, doubts, and frustrations.	 LEVERAGE PATH Learning to leverage natural weaknesses as strengths Type 3 moves toward Confident side of Type 9 • Seek ways to support others and their goals instead of your own. • Collaborative and team oriented. • Succeed out of joy and acceptance rather than insecurity or fear. • More relaxed and steady instead of constant performing and striving.

Type 3 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have "balanced wings" where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

3w2 "Star"

More focused on others and being seen by others. Encouraging, relational, likeable, and doesn't mind being the center of attention. Wants to achieve success but does not wish to achieve it alone.

3w4 "Professional"

Focuses on success in a more quiet and reserved manner. Seeks more creative and unique ways to achieve success. Does not mind if others notice their success as long as they reach their own definition of success.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Efficient, mission mindset, direct, driven, image bearers.

Weaknesses

Cut corners, missing details, or too image focused.

How to lead Type 3s

Type 3's will identify and work towards their definition of success. If there is not a clearly defined picture of what success is they can begin to craft this picture on their own and it may not be in alignment with the team objectives or your company mission. Belief is huge for a Type 3, lead them with constant vision and they will bring that vision to life. Give them opportunity to be seen and heard, especially in front of clients or large crowds. This will motivate them to continue to carry the mission forward.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

2,3,4 - Heart / Feeling Triad

Emotional Struggle - Shame

- 2 - Others Feelings - The Type 2 is ashamed that they have needs of their own so they will take action to meet the needs of others in hopes that they will be appreciated. They are more attuned to others' emotions which causes them to completely forget their own feelings and needs. This constant desire to give and receive love in exchange for giving leads to their dominant struggle of pride because their needs are not being met.
- 3 - Avoids Feelings - The Type 3 will avoid feelings as if feelings are a hindrance to their success. With this avoidance of feelings, they may "lose" who they wish to be or who others want them to be. This leads to their dominant struggle of deceit through whatever persona they are presenting at that time.
- 4 - Internalizes Feeling - Type 4's enjoy internalizing, feeling, and becoming attached to their emotions. They do not want to be detached from or move away from their feelings as they believe this is a significant part of their identity. They embrace being melancholy or emotional. Because of their awareness and connection to their emotions they experience their dominant struggle of envy. They are envious of what others have because they view themselves as lacking or flawed due to the awareness of what they do or do not have.

Common Desire: Significant Identity

- 2 - Seeks to take on the identity of being the most loving and caring person - When they are unable to give their support they feel a direct attack on their identity.
- 3 - Seeks to take on the identity of the most successful and accomplished person - They believe they are only as good as their last accomplishment and when they are not viewed as successful or have trouble defining their identity they will aim to transform into what their peers or surroundings say they should be.
- 4 - Seeks to be seen as the most special and unique person - They will constantly seek opportunities to prove they are unique or not normal and mundane. If they are compared or have their work compared to others they will feel a lack of identity or like their identity is being taken away from them.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 3

"It's not okay for you to have your own feelings and identity."

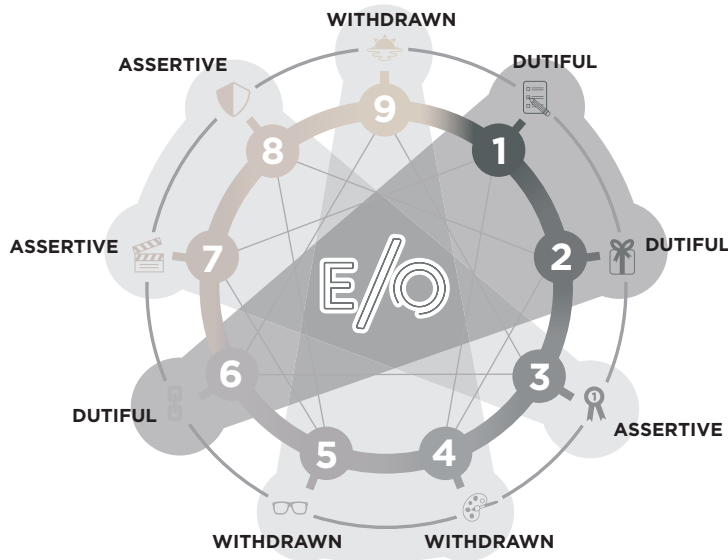

Defense Mechanisms

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 3 - Identification

Type 3s fear rejection for being themselves, so they identify and embody the admirable qualities people desire, instead of being their authentic self (chameleon behavior).

Experiencing approval and admiration by others is a substitute for what they really desire; being loved for who they are without needing to accomplish anything.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA "Stances")

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

3 - Assertive Style

- Moves against people.
- React to stress or difficulty by boosting, reinforcing, or expanding their sense of self.
- Not prone to backing down or withdrawing.
- When entering a room, they automatically infer that everything meaningful and important happening is connected to them.
- Will take control of others and situations.
- If there is a void in leadership they will naturally step in to lead.
- If there is no sense of direction or guidance they will provide it.
- Will think "mission first, feelings last."
- Will sacrifice themselves to achieve and expect others to do the same.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 3 Conflict Triggers

Embarrassment, being blamed, losing, looking less than, lack of validation or recognition, put in a position to fail.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
