THE ENTHUSIAST

Energetic, Versatile, Adventurous,
Playful, Scattered, Escapist

Always the optimist, others are drawn to your naturally encouraging energy. People are inspired by your limitless view of life.

Externally you are positive and happy, internally, you are always wanting more and fearful of missing out on something. Life is like cotton candy, sweet to the taste, but disappears quickly. To avoid being left without you are always striving for more.

You experience a deep internal wrestling when life becomes difficult as you seek to avoid emotional pain. When life gets complicated, painful, sad, or boring, you quickly escape to things that please you, allowing you to avoid painful or negative experiences. The problem with pursuing adventure, happiness, and stimulating experiences is the inability to enjoy the and appreciate the present.

In avoiding these painful experiences you will often find you end up creating even more painful experiences down the road. Avoiding painful things, or reframing negative into positive without truly dealing with it will always show up in counterproductive ways throughout your life.

Becoming scattered, uncommitted, and unreliable may cause your relationships to suffer. People close to you may get frustrated when they feel you value new experiences and people more than them. These tendencies can hinder emotional depth such as walking through challenging experiences together.

At your best, you embrace the present, able to savor it with gratitude. Trusting your needs will be met, you become more receptive and thoughtful. When you combine this with your natural creativity and energy, you'll inspire others as you walk through both the highs and lows of life.

Avoids

Commitment, being deprived, trapped, facing emotional pain, limited, bored, or missing out.

Pursues

Being happy, fully satisfied, or content. They seek to get the most from life and every experience.

Fulfillment

Knowing you are not missing anything.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Dominant Struggle

Gluttony - In their pursuit of being fully satisfied they feel empty inside and seek to fill themselves up to compensate for this feeling of lack. They can develop an insatiable desire to meet their needs grasping for every experience and opportunity in hopes of not missing out.

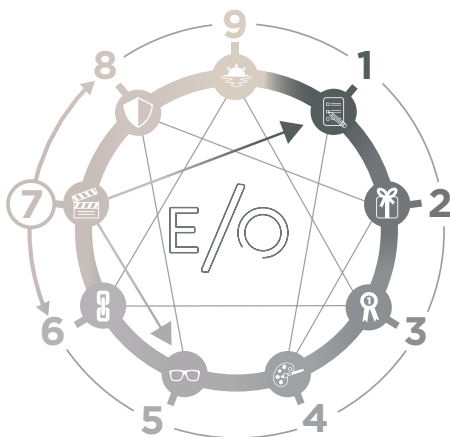

Type 7 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

 CONFIDENCE PATH How you think/behave when you are mentally/emotionally healthy Type 7 moves toward Confident side of Type 5 • Gain clarity and become more focused. • Seek knowledge to find your best path forward. • Your typically quick mind finds rest. • Become more committed and dedicated.	 INSECURITY PATH How you think/behave when mentally/emotionally stressed Type 7 moves toward Insecure side of Type 1 • Restrict and limit yourself to achieve goals. • Become more critical and judgmental of yourself and others. • Critical and angry towards others who place limitations on you. • Identify flaws and move away from them.
 FAMILIAR PATH How you think/behave with those closest to you, your blind-spot Type 7 moves toward Insecure side of Type 5 • Give yourself permission to rest instead of always being positive and energetic. • Withdraw and seek seclusion to recharge. • Share your more pessimistic and cynical thoughts and views.	 LEVERAGE PATH Learning to leverage natural weaknesses as strengths Type 7 moves toward Confident side of Type 1 • Begin to accept life and its flaws while focusing on a greater purpose. • Identify and focus on priorities without procrastinating or avoiding. • Take ownership of your emotions and seek to understand them. • Become more responsible.

Type 7 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have “balanced wings” where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

7w6 “Entertainer”

More anxious and slow to react than the 7w8. Still very adventurous yet more calculated in their decisions.

7w8 “Realist”

Entrepreneurial in nature. Seeks strength and power in pursuit of new external opportunities.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Starter, innovative, relational, outgoing, fun, energetic.

Weaknesses

Scattered, lack of focus, low follow-through, lack of empathy.

How to lead Type 7s

Type 7's make great leaders but are not necessarily great managers. To lead is to create and that is what the Type 7 is best at. They will lead and find new exciting ways to accomplish a mission. To manage is to maintain and the idea of "maintenance" will eventually trigger the 7's greatest fear of being trapped. If you let them run they will learn new ways to serve your mission and your team. This type will thrive in the brainstorm phase of any idea or project.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

5,6,7 - Head / Thought

Emotional Struggle - Fear/Anxiety

- 5 - Externalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by not knowing or having enough the Type 5 will seek to learn as much as possible and hoard their resources to avoid the fear of not having or knowing enough. This constant fear of lack leads to the dominant struggle of greed.
- 6 - Internalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by all of the worst possible outcomes the Type 6 will attempt to plan and prepare for all of these worst case scenarios in an attempt to manage their anxiety. However, it is impossible to predict all possible outcomes which will lead to the dominant struggle of crippling anxiety.
- 7 - Forgets Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by their inner world the Type 7 will keep themselves busy with external stimulus, actions, and adventures to not have to face their internal fears and emotions. This constant seeking leads to the dominant struggle of gluttony.

Common Desire: Security

- 5 - Seeks security through knowledge, stockpiling resources, or time alone - The Type 5 is most attuned to their energy levels and will become more withdrawn or angry when they feel obligated or invaded.
- 6 - Seeks security in knowing and planning for all possible outcomes - They will seek this same level of security from those around them and may become frustrated or anxious if they feel this security is threatened.
- 7 - Seeks security by avoiding their inner fears and looking to their external world to fill them up - They will seek new adventures, experiences, and relationships to avoid having to be alone with their thoughts and emotions. If they feel trapped or limited they will seek an escape.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 7

Defense Mechanisms

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 7 - Rationalization

Type 7s avoid owning their real intentions, motivations, and how their behavior impacts others by rationalizing their unacceptable thoughts, feelings, and actions.

They are skilled at knowing how to reframe any situation so their behavior is justified. This allows them to avoid the reality of sadness, grief, hurting others, pain, limitations, or boredom. They are skilled masters at charming their way out of being in trouble by spinning any negative situation into one that sounds positive, fun, and exciting to others. They are so upbeat, positive, and likable that it is hard for others to stay angry or upset with them.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA “Stances”)

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

7 - Assertive Style

- Moves against people.
- React to stress or difficulty by boosting, reinforcing, or expanding their sense of self.
- Not prone to backing down or withdrawing.
- When entering a room, they automatically infer that everything meaningful and important happening is connected to them.
- Will take control of others and situations.
- If there is a void in leadership they will naturally step in to lead.
- If there is no sense of direction or guidance they will provide it.
- Will think “mission first, feelings last.”
- Will sacrifice themselves to achieve and expect others to do the same.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 7 Conflict Triggers

Being dismissed, limited, criticized, forced to deal with negativity, pessimistic or overly critical people, feeling trapped.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
