THE INVESTIGATOR

Intelligent, Diligent, Thorough,
Fact-oriented, Detached

How do we do the right things in the right way? “Knowledge is power” is your mindset in all situations.

You experience the world as a naturally intrusive and overwhelming place. Believing that life demands too much of you, you focus your attention on conserving your energy and resources to avoid depletion. This intense desire to hoard resources and control your environment can become damaging to relationships as you can become extremely private and emotionally distant.

You often feel that you must know as much as possible before sharing your thoughts to avoid being seen as or feeling incompetent. This can overwhelm you and cause you to retreat.

This desire for knowledge, independence, and a life free from obligations can strain your relationships since connection, feelings, and vulnerability are natural components to a healthy partnership. The demands of living in relationship with others is overwhelming so you maintain a healthy distance so you are not easily obligated.

You believe the confidence to engage with others will eventually come, but never feel you have enough knowledge or resources to enter into the mysterious and complex world of another person.

At your best, you discover that your needs are not a problem. You can become more generous with giving of your energy and resources. You begin living from your heart as well as your head. That gift, coupled with your great vision and perspective, reflects true wisdom and provides your greatest impact.

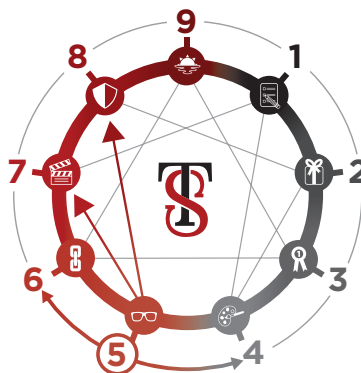

Avoids

Being obligated, invaded, or not existing, thought incapable or ignorant, having your energy or resources depleted.

Pursues

Having enough knowledge to be capable and competent.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Dominant Struggle

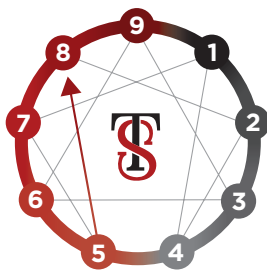

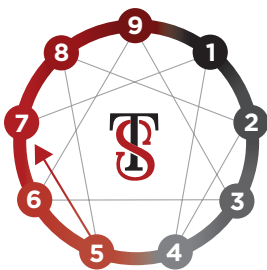

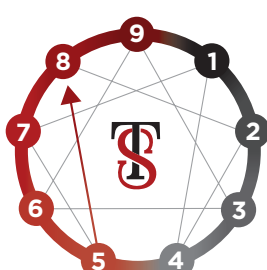

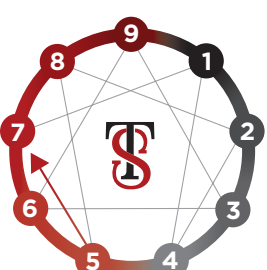

Greed - The Type 5, even in excess, does not believe they have enough to exist. With this constant tension they can easily think they must store their energy and resources to a point of greed and selfishness.

Fulfillment

Knowing you have enough.

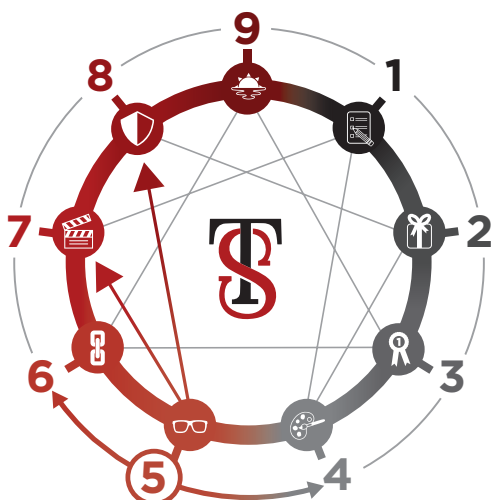

Type 5 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

 CONFIDENCE PATH How you think/behave when you are mentally/emotionally healthy Type 5 moves toward Confident side of Type 8 • Confident, decisive, and assertive. • Become more generous and thoughtful. • Connect your thoughts to emotions and instincts. • Operate from an abundance mindset vs. a scarcity mindset.	 INSECURITY PATH How you think/behave when mentally/emotionally stressed Type 5 moves toward Insecure side of Type 7 • Become impulsive in your pursuit of knowledge and fulfillment. • Impatient and quick to fill or overbook your schedule. • Seek to gain control of meeting your needs.
 FAMILIAR PATH How you think/behave with those closest to you, your blind-spot Type 5 moves toward Insecure side of Type 8 • Aggressively assert your boundaries. • Confrontational when displeased. • Seek to be understood before understanding. • More provocative or argumentative.	 LEVERAGE PATH Learning to leverage natural weaknesses as strengths Type 5 moves toward Confident side of Type 7 • Become more joyful and energetic to enjoy life or situations. • More spontaneous and trusting of others. • More physically active understanding you have all the energy you need.

Type 5 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have “balanced wings” where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

5w4 “Iconoclast”

Naturally isolated and withdrawn. Does their best work alone with little oversight. They will seek the best, most creative way of doing things.

5w6 “Problem Solver”

More extroverted and loyal to those that are close to them. At their core they seek knowledge and with this wing they seek security. The longing for knowledge and security results in more cautious and calculated behavior.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Problem-solver, learner, systems oriented, factual, logical.

Weaknesses

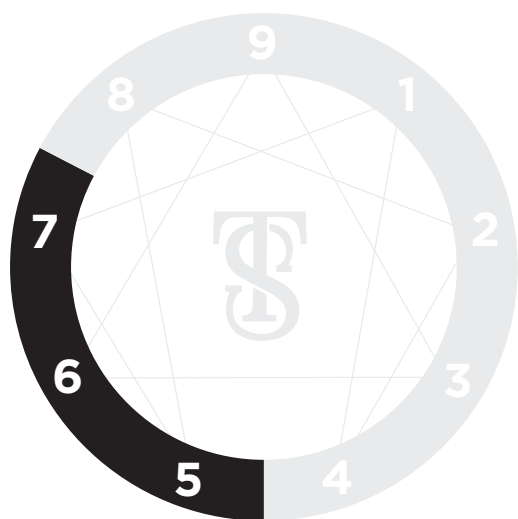

Narrow minded, limiting beliefs, scarcity mindset, slow to action.

How to lead Type 5s

Allow the Type 5 to ask all of their questions as they will find the best way to do the right things and ultimately move your team forward on the most efficient and effective path. Leave room for the Type 5 to create systems for efficiency moving forward. They hate wasting time and energy so let them find more efficient ways of doing business or achieving desired results. With that said, help the Type 5 to see all perspectives to include feelings and intangible results. Since they are fact oriented and live in their head they will not naturally be connected to the “feeling” of something. It must make sense for the Type 5 to take action but sometimes we must take action in the face of adversity or in the absence of details. Avoid obligating the Type 5 on a consistent basis. This will lead to their inevitable withdrawal.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the “Centers Of Intelligence” and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

5,6,7 - Head / Thought

Emotional Struggle - Fear/Anxiety

- 5 - Externalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by not knowing or having enough the Type 5 will seek to learn as much as possible and hoard their resources to avoid the fear of not having or knowing enough. This constant fear of lack leads to the dominant struggle of greed.
- 6 - Internalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by all of the worst possible outcomes the Type 6 will attempt to plan and prepare for all of these worst case scenarios in an attempt to manage their anxiety. However, it is impossible to predict all possible outcomes which will lead to the dominant struggle of crippling anxiety.
- 7 - Forgets Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by their inner world the Type 7 will keep themselves busy with external stimulus, actions, and adventures to not have to face their internal fears and emotions. This constant seeking leads to the dominant struggle of gluttony.

Common Desire: Security

- 5 - Seeks security through knowledge, stockpiling resources, or time alone - The Type 5 is most attuned to their energy levels and will become more withdrawn or angry when they feel obligated or invaded.
- 6 - Seeks security in knowing and planning for all possible outcomes - They will seek this same level of security from those around them and may become frustrated or anxious if they feel this security is threatened.
- 7 - Seeks security by avoiding their inner fears and looking to their external world to fill them up - They will seek new adventures, experiences, and relationships to avoid having to be alone with their thoughts and emotions. If they feel trapped or limited they will seek an escape.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 5

Defense Mechanisms

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 5 - Isolation

Type 5’s avoid feeling overwhelmed and empty inside by isolating themselves or retreating into their minds. They cut themselves off from their feelings and other people, and compartmentalize their world.

This defense mechanism allows them to distance themselves from what they believe is draining them or their resources. This defense mechanism gives the illusion of being effective since it allows them to restore their energy reserves. But it can cause real harm to their relationships.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA “Stances”)

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

5 - Withdrawn Style

- Moves away from people because of fear or expectation of not having their needs met.
- React to stress or difficulty by moving away from others and the world, and instead move toward their “inner world” of imagination (aka “zoning out”).
- When entering a room, they automatically sense they don’t fit in.
- Feel they have to summon up the energy to face the world and life.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

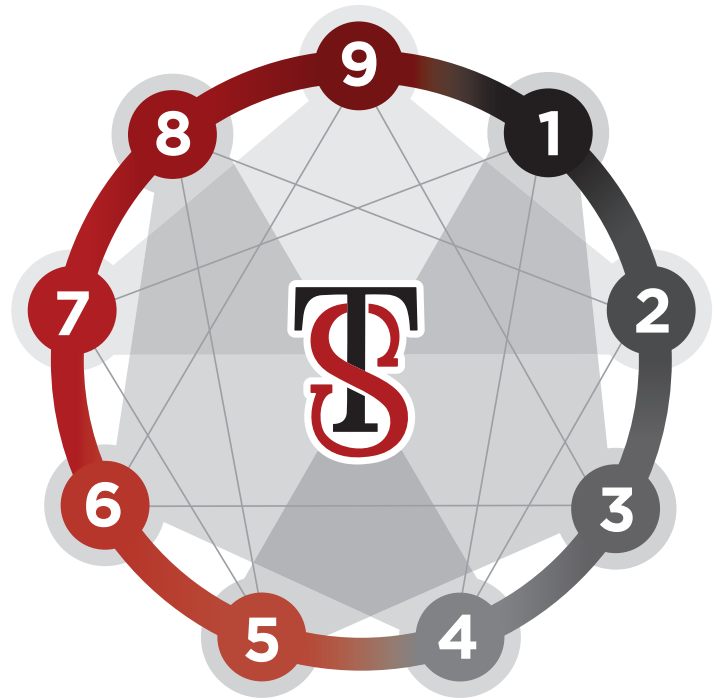

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 5 Conflict Triggers

Being obligated, last minute changes, surprise, lack of privacy and space, broken trust, misinformation.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
