THE PEACEMAKER

Empathetic, Reassuring, Accepting,
Accommodating, Resigned

You are relaxed, warm, and welcoming. You always tend to be a source of connection and harmony.

You have the strength of being able to see from every point of view, a natural mediator. Putting yourself in the shoes of others you bring connection where connection seems to be lost.

However, this is a constant burden you feel you must carry. You believe it is your responsibility to ensure connection in the world which creates a natural fear and avoidance of conflict. Yes, you fear conflict, but it is what conflict brings that you fear most, a perceived loss of connection. However, many others believe that conflict IS connection. Now what? In a world full of conflict and disagreement your inner stability and comfort is always at risk. To ensure others are at peace and to avoid conflict you numb your own desires, dreams, and feelings. Hence, the slothful dominant struggle. You “go along to get along.”

Numbing your desires is also harmful as it reinforces the thought that your voice and presence are not as important as others. You want to be heard and seen but you struggle with inserting yourself. Feeling like it is too much trouble to make yourself seen and heard you fall asleep to your passions and withdraw to keep the peace, internally and externally.

Your attempts to keep the peace inevitably backfire as those around you get frustrated at your passivity, stubbornness, emotional unavailability, and passive-aggressive responses. This results in the very thing you were seeking to avoid, conflict.

However, at your best, you become fully aware of your passions and desires as you “wake up” and realize the only way out is through. You know and believe that you matter and are built to make a difference in this world. You finally understand that true peace comes from entering into conflict, not avoiding it, you genuinely engage with others and life. You bring people together, embrace purpose, and finally achieve true harmony.

Avoids

Being overlooked, in conflict, tension, discord, feeling shut out, expressing their desires, or losing connection with others.

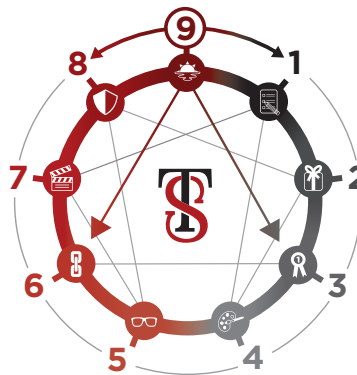

Pursues

Inner stability, peace, being heard, understood, and developing connection with others.

Fulfillment

Knowing your presence matters.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

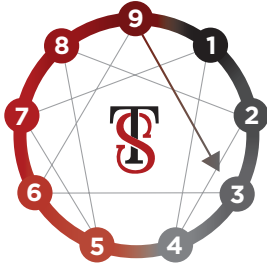

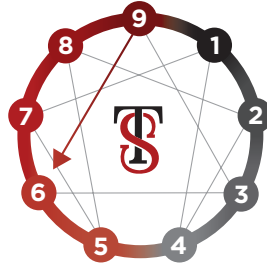

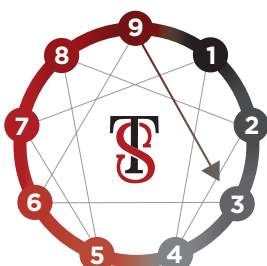

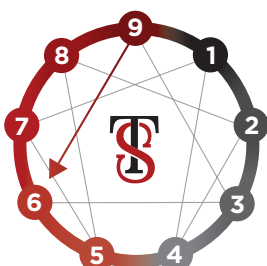

Dominant Struggle

Sloth - Withdrawing from the world and even their own thoughts in order to avoid internal or external conflict. They can become mentally and physically slothful by forgetting their needs, desires, and skills by shutting down or merging with others desires or needs.

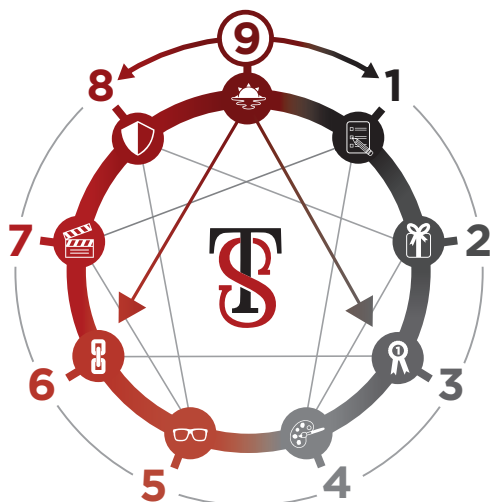

Type 9 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

 CONFIDENCE PATH How you think/behave when you are mentally/emotionally healthy Type 9 moves toward Confident side of Type 3 - Invest in yourself through self-development and become focused in achieving your goals. - Confidently assert yourself knowing your presence matters. - Share more of your knowledge and insights. - Plow a path for connection between yourself and others.	 INSECURITY PATH How you think/behave when mentally/emotionally stressed Type 9 moves toward Insecure side of Type 6 - Anxious, worried, and fearful of worst case scenarios. - Irritable, defensive, and emotionally reactive. - Become frantic and scattered seeking to take care of responsibilities that you have been avoiding.
 FAMILIAR PATH How you think/behave with those closest to you, your blind-spot Type 9 moves toward Insecure side of Type 3 - Make your value and worth known by bragging about yourself. - Desire to be noticed. - Easily upset when your flaws or failures are identified. - Stay busy to feel productive and to distract yourself from more important issues.	 LEVERAGE PATH Learning to leverage natural weaknesses as strengths Type 9 moves toward Confident side of Type 6 - Become more dedicated to your responsibilities. - Confidently assert yourself and your ability to add value to others. - Courageously step out of your comfort zone. - Persevere through adversity or difficulties.

Type 9 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have “balanced wings” where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

9w8 “Comfort-Seeker”

More assertive and driven yet still seeking connection at their core. Confrontational like the Type 8 yet more understanding in their approach.

9w1 “Dreamer”

Compliant in behavior they seek connection at their core and desire to maintain order as they maintain harmony and inner peace. Less outgoing and oftentimes more introverted.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Empathetic, warm, connectors, mediators.

Weaknesses

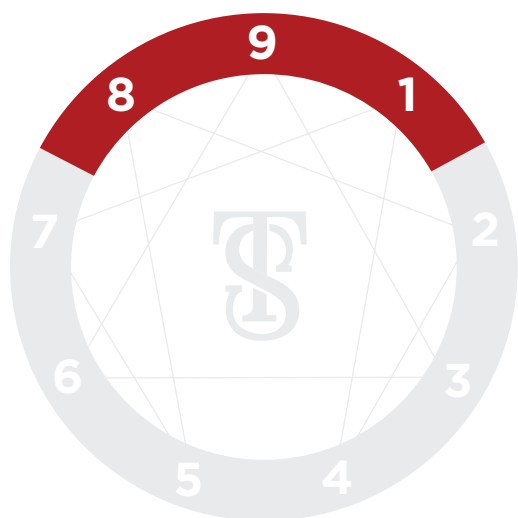

Withdrawn, passive, avoidant, lack of drive, low capacity.

How to lead Type 9s

Type 9's will not automatically assert themselves but when they are invited into the conversation they will share the insight they have kept hidden for fear of conflict or interruption. Ensure they know their presence, voice, and opinions matter. Type 9's are one of the most underutilized members of the team because they will not naturally make themselves heard.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

8,9,1 - Gut / Instinct Triad

Emotional Struggle - Anger

- 8 - Externalizes Anger - Seeking to protect others and maintain control the Type 8 will externalize their anger with fast and intense reactions or responses. The Type 8 will take action on their anger in order to maintain control of their environment which leads to their dominant struggle of excess.
- 9 - Avoids Anger - Anger disrupts the peace and harmony that a Type 9 longs for so they will fall asleep to or avoid their anger in order to keep the peace. This avoidance behavior leads to their dominant struggle of sloth by falling asleep to their anger or desires.
- 1 - Internalizes Anger - the Type 1 believes that anger or the expression of anger is bad so they will repress their anger which leads to being critical or judgmental. This constant repression of anger leads to their dominant struggle of resentment for themselves, their environment, or others.

Common Desire: Justice

- 8 - Does not want to be harmed or manipulated - They will take action when witnessing or experiencing an injustice for themselves, those they care about, or their environment.
- 9 - Does not want others to be overlooked or feel unimportant - They will respond to this injustice by making space for others to be seen and heard.
- 1 - Bears the burden of responsibility and believes that justice means doing the right things and being right - They will bring attention to what is wrong so it can be addressed, fixed, or improved.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 9

"It's not okay to assert yourself or think much of yourself."

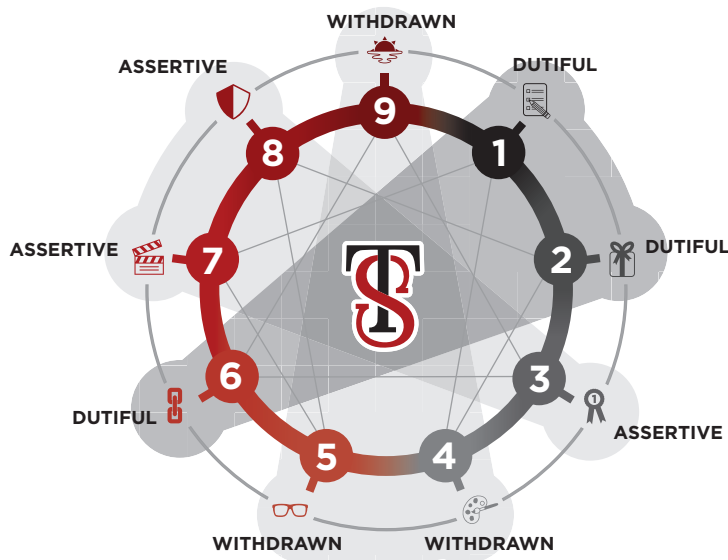

Defense Mechanisms

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 9 - Dissociation

If something feels too large, difficult, or uncomfortable to handle Type 9's will unconsciously become numb or check out.

They distract themselves by engaging in activities that are routine, familiar, require very little effort or attention, or give them comfort. If these routines are disrupted, they can become irritated, feel agitated, or even disoriented. With this, the Type 9 will completely fall asleep to or dissociate from their desires.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA "Stances")

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

9 - Withdrawn Style

- Moves away from people because of fear or expectation of not having their needs met.
- React to stress or difficulty by moving away from others and the world, and instead move toward their "inner world" of imagination (aka "zoning out").
- When entering a room, they automatically sense they don't fit in.
- Feel they have to summon up the energy to face the world and life.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

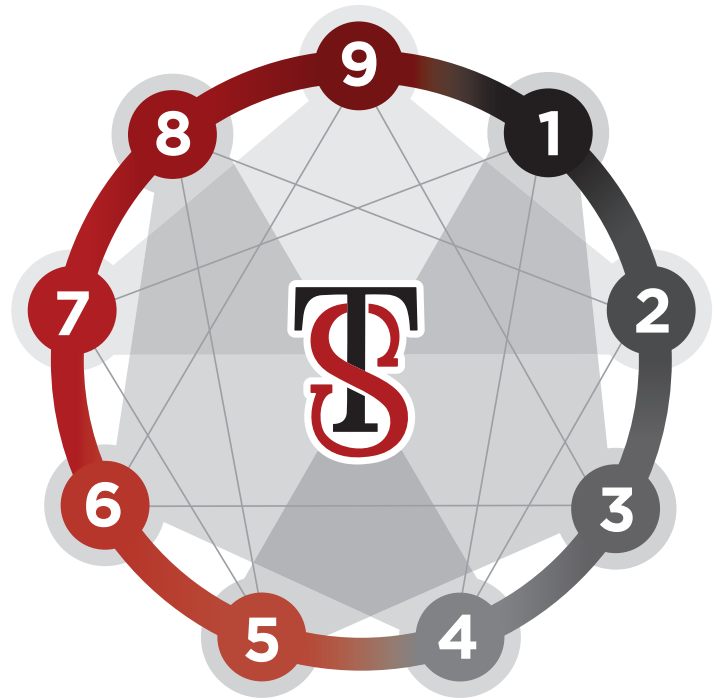

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 9 Conflict Triggers

Disruption, being taken advantage of, being told what to do, being ignored, direct confrontation, rude or insensitive behavior.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
