

TYPE

6

THE LOYALIST

Responsible, Prepared,
Committed, Cautious, Anxious, Direct

Always preparing for whatever life throws at you, you work to be a source of security and support for yourself and the world.

However, you are plagued with constant fear and uncertainty. You believe the world is a dangerous place where you must be hyper-vigilant, scanning for things that could threaten your safety, security, and relationships.

Whether you do this to avoid danger or challenge it head-on, you can be prone to see and assume the worst. You deal with your anxiety by preemptively running through and preventing potential problems or negative outcomes. You may have heard of an “Inner Critic”. The Type 6 has an “Inner Committee” constantly asking, “But what if this or that happens?”

You can be overcome with uncertainty, self-doubt, worry, and destructive thinking. Your mind can become unclear, indecisive, and skeptical. You long for a world that is trouble free and predictable so you plan as much as possible.

In relationships, you may struggle with projecting your fears, doubts, and insecurities onto others as a means to protect yourself. These misplaced fears, suspicions, and doubts often erode your trust in others, and even yourself.

At your best you learn to overcome your fears and anxiety by realizing it is not your responsibility to solve for all of life's potential problems. You can rest and trust, feeling a peace that surpasses your fears.

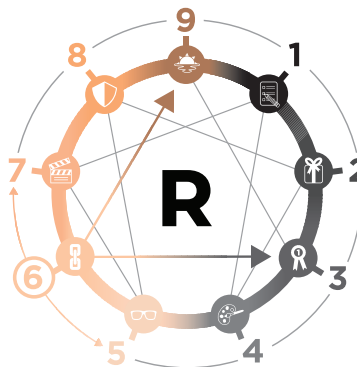

Avoids

Fear itself, being without support, security, or guidance; being blamed, singled out, or abandoned.

Pursues

Support and security. They gravitate towards mentors and teachers to ensure they have the guidance they need for all scenarios.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Dominant Struggle

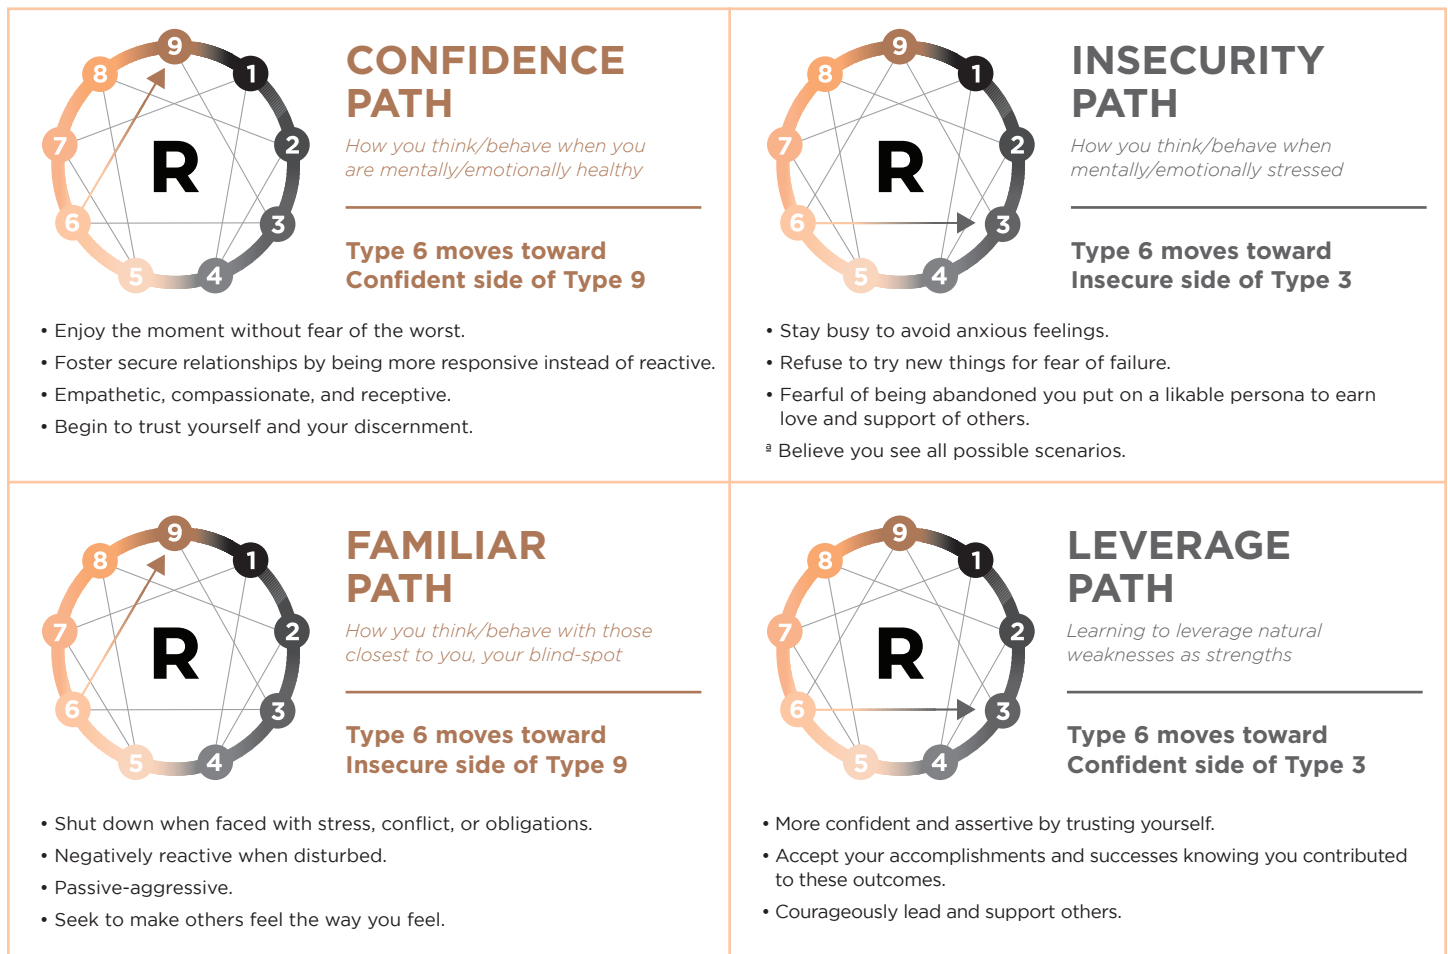

Anxiety - Natural worst case scenario thinkers they find themselves constantly anxious trying to predict all the possible situations and outcomes they may encounter. This can become debilitating to the point of sickness.

Fulfillment

Knowing you have security.

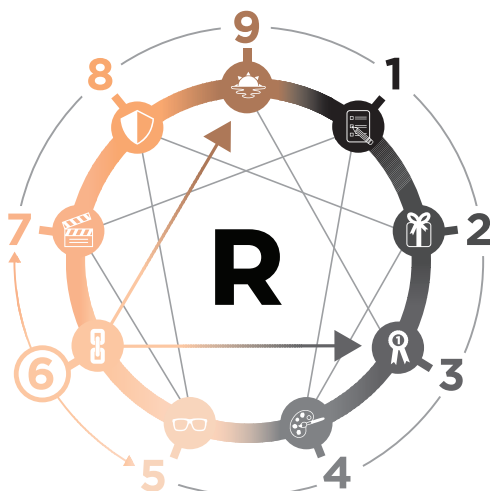

Type 6 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

Type 6 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have “balanced wings” where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

6w5 “Defender”

Introverted and cautious. Plans and prepares for worst case scenarios by seeking more knowledge to avoid them.

6w7 “Buddy”

Sociable, energetic, and playful. They are still anxious and worst case scenario thinkers but are more excitable in their outlook on life and seek a more fun way to avoid their anxiety.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Planning, loyal, dedicated, consistent, supportive.

Weaknesses

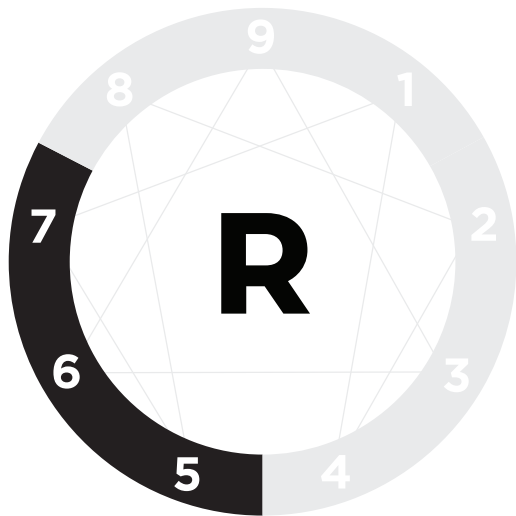

Anxious, fearful, worried, worst case scenario thinking, devils advocate.

How to lead Type 6s

The Type 6 craves security and guidance so ensure these needs are being met in your leadership. Even in correction ensure they know they are still safe and secure and you are leading from a place of support. They will have the tendency of internalizing correction as a lack of support and think you are giving up on them which will trigger their anxiety. As long as they know they are supported they will be the most dedicated member of your team. Leverage their worst case scenario thinking as risk management to ensure all avenues are covered before releasing a product or executing a plan.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

5,6,7 - Head / Thought

Emotional Struggle - Fear/Anxiety

- 5 - Externalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by not knowing or having enough the Type 5 will seek to learn as much as possible and hoard their resources to avoid the fear of not having or knowing enough. This constant fear of lack leads to the dominant struggle of greed.
- 6 - Internalizes Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by all of the worst possible outcomes the Type 6 will attempt to plan and prepare for all of these worst case scenarios in an attempt to manage their anxiety. However, it is impossible to predict all possible outcomes which will lead to the dominant struggle of crippling anxiety.
- 7 - Forgets Fear - Fearful of the anxiety caused by their inner world the Type 7 will keep themselves busy with external stimulus, actions, and adventures to not have to face their internal fears and emotions. This constant seeking leads to the dominant struggle of gluttony.

Common Desire: Security

- 5 - Seeks security through knowledge, stockpiling resources, or time alone - The Type 5 is most attuned to their energy levels and will become more withdrawn or angry when they feel obligated or invaded.
- 6 - Seeks security in knowing and planning for all possible outcomes - They will seek this same level of security from those around them and may become frustrated or anxious if they feel this security is threatened.
- 7 - Seeks security by avoiding their inner fears and looking to their external world to fill them up - They will seek new adventures, experiences, and relationships to avoid having to be alone with their thoughts and emotions. If they feel trapped or limited they will seek an escape.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 6

“It’s not okay to trust or depend on yourself.”

Defense Mechanisms

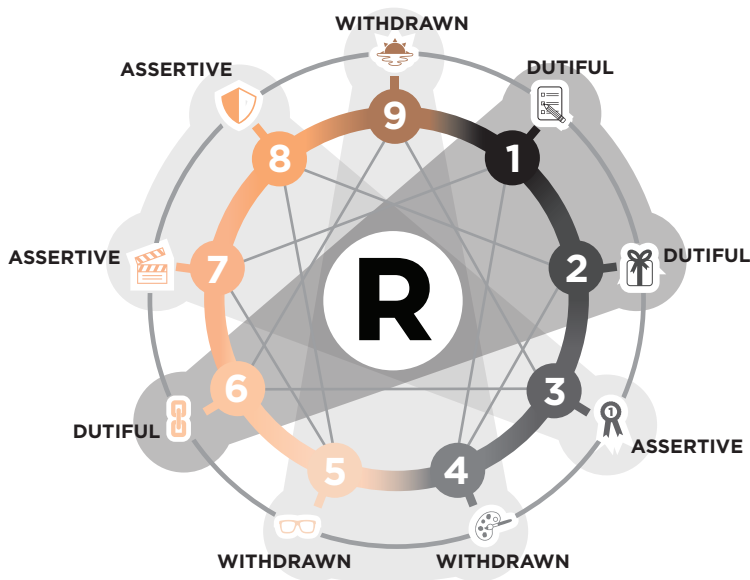

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 6 - Projection

Type 6’s will unconsciously attribute their own unwanted and unacceptable thoughts, feelings, motives, characteristics, and behaviors onto others.

Type 6s will use this defense mechanism when it is hard for them to accept and acknowledge that these are their own issues. Their projections are reality and this will occur most often when they are anxious. The more they project the more they create a false reality which ultimately creates the very conflict they are trying to avoid.

Recognizing their projections and discerning if their thoughts and insights are projections or reality will help prevent lasting harm to their relationships.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA “Stances”)

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

6 - Dutiful Style

- Moves toward others to get their needs met.
- React to stress or difficulty by serving or giving.
- Will ask themselves, “How can I meet the expectations others have of me? How can I be a responsible person?”
- Believe they must do something to get something.
- Loyal and committed.
- Will become compliant and do what they believe is expected of them.
- Lives with the regret of what they should have done or could have done.
- Will forget their wants and desires and instead do things on behalf of others to be loved and accepted.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

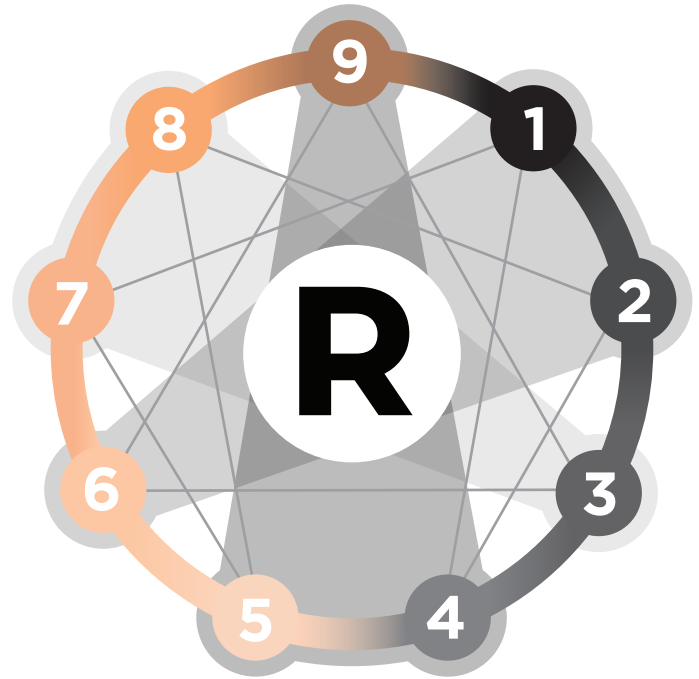

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 6 Conflict Triggers

Being accused, blamed, targeted, placed under pressure, disingenuous behavior, lack of commitment and follow-through, being abandoned, having their anxieties dismissed.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
