

TYPE

4

THE INDIVIDUALIST

Creative, Authentic, Demonstrative,
Deep, Temperamental

You offer a unique perspective on creativity and emotional depth. You challenge those that live their life at a surface level, encouraging thoughtful connection.

You are gifted with a profound depth and understanding of emotions. You bravely embrace these depths, regardless of how it feels, to discover a rich meaning and purpose of life as a whole.

You aim to explore our complicated world in search of meaning and authentic connection, and desire to look inside yourself to find your unique significance and value.

However, you feel burdened by a constant belief that you alone are missing something important. Craving more ideal circumstances, you often feel disconnected or fundamentally flawed. Struggling with feelings of envy, you compare yourself to others, believing those around you possess the things you desire.

When you obsess over finding your unique significance, you can become self-absorbed and temperamental. You are painfully self-conscious, spending a great deal of energy contemplating on how different you are from others. You navigate feelings of self-hatred and shame, along with emptiness and despair. You may feel anxious around others, always wondering what they think about you, perpetually seeing your weakness and never your strengths and gifts.

Beyond your internal strife, you can get into relational conflicts by being moody, emotionally demanding, withholding, dramatic, and volatile, causing you to appear self-absorbed and disinterested in others.

At your best, you can relieve yourself from the pressure of your emotions and bring forth your gifts in extraordinary ways. You have a deep intuition into others' suffering and can shoulder deep pains and feelings without being overwhelmed. It brings you great joy to connect with others on a deep level and to support them in their distress, this is your greatest value to the world.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Avoids

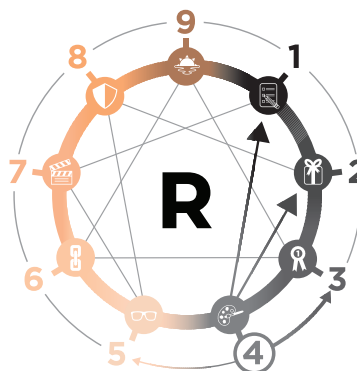

Being thought of as normal, emotionally cut off, plain, mundane, defective, or flawed.

Pursues

Authenticity, being unique, special, accepted, and creative.

Fulfillment

Knowing you are unique.

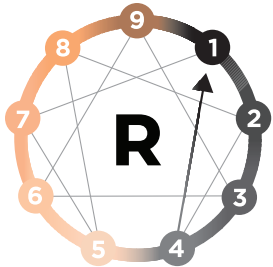

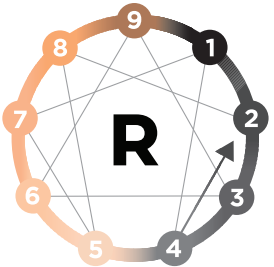

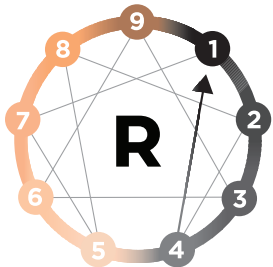

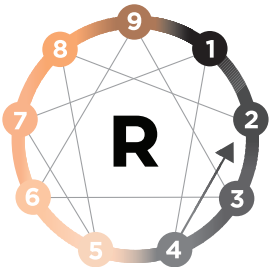

Dominant Struggle

Envy - As the Type 4 strives to be unique and special they can't help but feel that they are inherently flawed. They believe something is missing and begin to believe those around them have that "missing" piece that they need so they become envious.

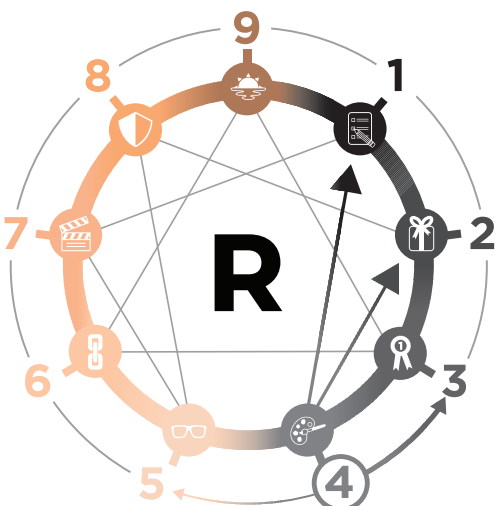

Type 4 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

 CONFIDENCE PATH How you think/ behave when you are mentally/emotionally healthy Type 4 moves toward Confident side of Type 1 • Take responsibility for your success. • Understand and acknowledge your strengths. • Become emotionally focused and objective. • Disciplined and productive.	 INSECURITY PATH How you think/ behave when mentally/emotionally stressed Type 4 moves toward Insecure side of Type 2 • Defensive over your hurt feelings. • Possessive and manipulative. • Become emotionally reactive and insecure.
 FAMILIAR PATH How you think/ behave with those closest to you, your blind-spot Type 4 moves toward Insecure side of Type 1 • Vocalize perceived flaws in others. • Become more judgmental and critical of self and others. • Become impatient, particular, and demanding.	 LEVERAGE PATH Learning to leverage natural weaknesses as strengths Type 4 moves toward Confident side of Type 2 • Care for and support others through selfless service. • Become grateful for what you have instead of focusing on what is "missing." • Identify and openly affirm the strengths and accomplishments of others.

Type 4 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have "balanced wings" where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

4w3 "Aristocrat"

Very ambitious and outgoing. At their core they long to be special and different and wish to be seen as successful for their special qualities. Can become emotionally volatile.

4w5 "Bohemian"

Extremely introverted and withdrawn. Seeks intellectual depth and does not mind being removed from the crowd or the group. They do their best work when left alone

Leadership Style

Strengths

Creative, unique, innovative, passionate, authentic.

Weaknesses

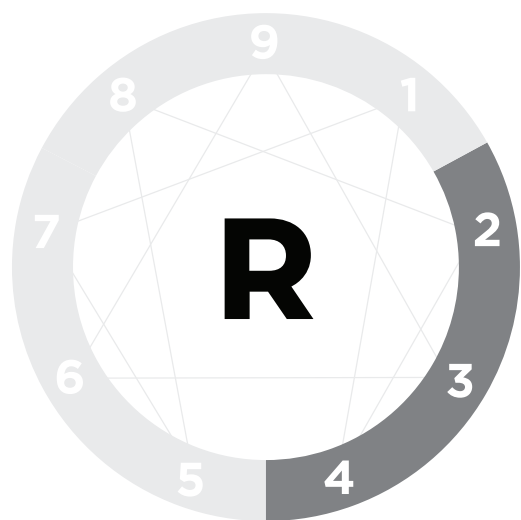

Envious, emotional, withdrawn, prideful.

How to lead Type 4s

Never, under any circumstance, ever compare a Type 4 to others or compare their work to others. The Type 4 inherently believes they are flawed or missing something so to be compared will automatically trigger the worst in them. Affirm them and avoid surface level connection. The Type 4 craves depth in their connections so the more authentic you're the better your relationship will be and you will be able to channel the best in them. They are natural "outside of the box" thinkers so give them opportunity to flex these muscles in your team or when executing a project.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

2,3,4 - Heart / Feeling Triad

Emotional Struggle - Shame

- 2 - Others Feelings - The Type 2 is ashamed that they have needs of their own so they will take action to meet the needs of others in hopes that they will be appreciated. They are more attuned to others' emotions which causes them to completely forget their own feelings and needs. This constant desire to give and receive love in exchange for giving leads to their dominant struggle of pride because their needs are not being met.
- 3 - Avoids Feelings - The Type 3 will avoid feelings as if feelings are a hindrance to their success. With this avoidance of feelings, they may "lose" who they wish to be or who others want them to be. This leads to their dominant struggle of deceit through whatever persona they are presenting at that time.
- 4 - Internalizes Feeling - Type 4's enjoy internalizing, feeling, and becoming attached to their emotions. They do not want to be detached from or move away from their feelings as they believe this is a significant part of their identity. They embrace being melancholy or emotional. Because of their awareness and connection to their emotions they experience their dominant struggle of envy. They are envious of what others have because they view themselves as lacking or flawed due to the awareness of what they do or do not have.

Common Desire: Significant Identity

- 2 - Seeks to take on the identity of being the most loving and caring person - When they are unable to give their support they feel a direct attack on their identity.
- 3 - Seeks to take on the identity of the most successful and accomplished person - They believe they are only as good as their last accomplishment and when they are not viewed as successful or have trouble defining their identity they will aim to transform into what their peers or surroundings say they should be.
- 4 - Seeks to be seen as the most special and unique person - They will constantly seek opportunities to prove they are unique or not normal and mundane. If they are compared or have their work compared to others they will feel a lack of identity or like their identity is being taken away from them.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 4

"It's not okay to be too much and not enough."

Defense Mechanisms

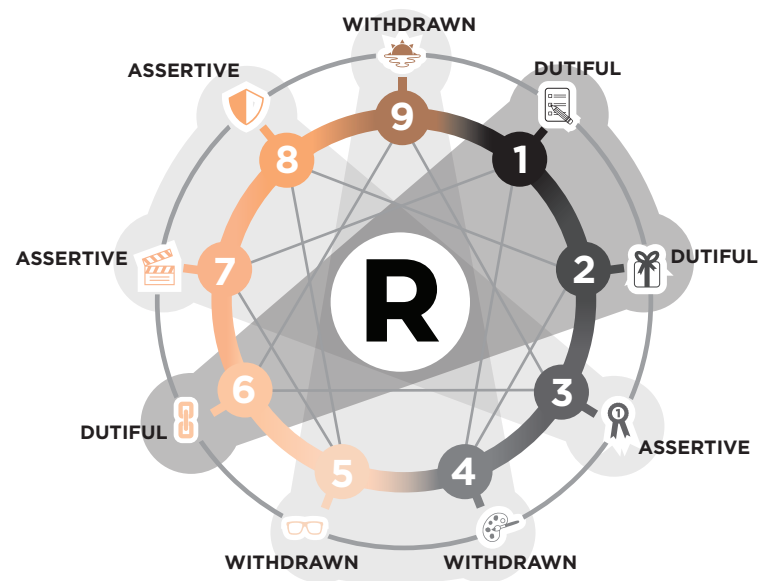

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 4 - Introjection

Instead of blocking out negative information, they will fully absorb, internalize, and incorporate information into their sense of self. This is called Introjection.

They discount positive statements said about them, allowing them to cope with painful information and neutralize external threats. They prefer to inflict pain on themselves instead of responding to criticism or rejection from others.

When they introject, they can't distinguish between reality and fantasy because it all feels real. It's hard for them to realize that this defense mechanism does not fend off negativity. It creates a deep well of self-deprecating statements that continually shame them.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA "Stances")

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

4 - Withdrawn Style

- Moves away from people because of fear or expectation of not having their needs met.
- React to stress or difficulty by moving away from others and the world, and instead move toward their "inner world" of imagination (aka "zoning out").
- When entering a room, they automatically sense they don't fit in.
- Feel they have to summon up the energy to face the world and life.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

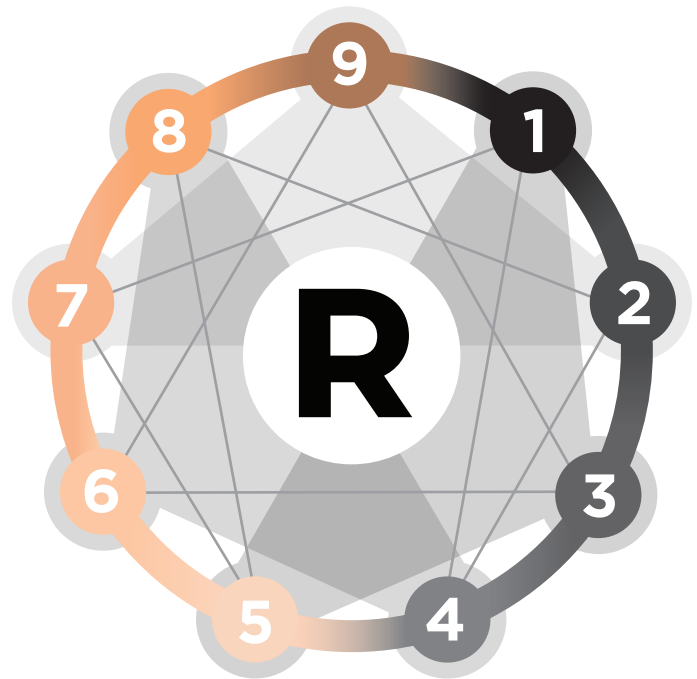

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 4 Conflict Triggers

Disingenuous behavior or people, being compared, common treatment, not being valued, having their work rejected, envy evoking behaviors.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.