THE CHALLENGER

Protective, Confident, Assertive,
Confrontational, Self-Forgetting, Intense

Justice and protection are the fuel to your fire. You leverage your big-hearted nature and strength to be the change you want to see.

In the same way you seek protection for others you also seek protection for yourself. Your tough exterior is to ensure you are not taken advantage of or manipulated. Betrayal is your greatest fear and yet you tend to believe it is inevitable so you fight to earn and build a trusting environment.

Your intense nature to achieve justice and control can often leave others in your wake. They will not be able to run as hard or understand your aggressive nature which often leads to you being misunderstood. You are acting in their and your best interest but not all people are wired like you, they just won't understand. Your drive will be perceived as domineering, confrontational, and insensitive. Underneath your external strength is a deep fear of loss or betrayal and a heart that would do anything to serve those around them. This must be communicated vocally, however, because it is rarely felt. Where other people become fearful and passive, you face your fears head-on becoming aggressive. "I will control my fears before they control me."

Inevitably, this approach ends up doing more harm than good. To protect yourself, you live in denial, suppressing your emotions that cause you to feel vulnerable, out of control or exposed, living as though those feelings never existed.

In relationships with others, you may sacrifice intimacy so that your weaknesses can't be discovered and used against you. Denying yourself closeness and tenderness with others, as well as the giving or receiving of forgiveness, leaves you feeling incomplete. You miss out on the intimacy and support you actually long for.

When you are at your best, you can surrender your fear of betrayal and need for control and allow people to see an endearing and compassionate strength. From that place, you can better protect the innocent from injustice, empower others, and use your leadership to accomplish your ultimate goals.

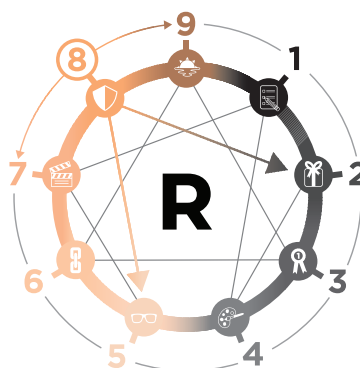

Avoids

Being weak, powerless, controlled, vulnerable, manipulated, or left at the mercy of injustice. When this fear is realized they will lash out or fight for control.

Pursues

Conflict in order to connect. Protecting themselves and those they care about.

INTERNAL DRIVERS

Dominant Struggle

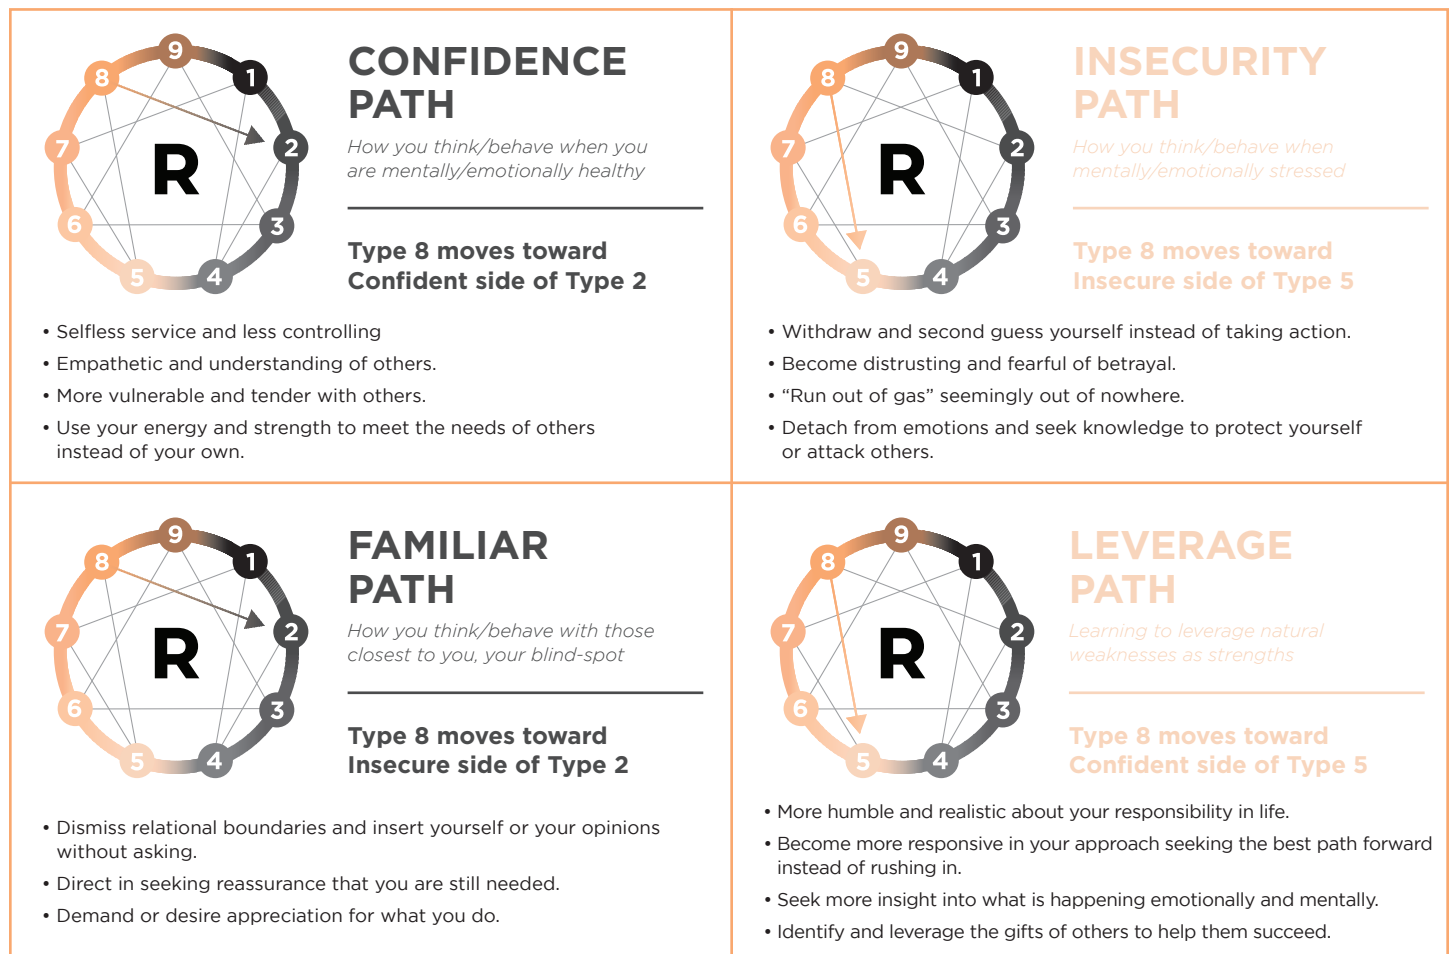

Lust/Excess- An insatiable appetite for power, intensity, and control. They impose their will on life and those around them in order to get what they want. "Too much is almost enough."

Fulfillment

Knowing you will not be betrayed.

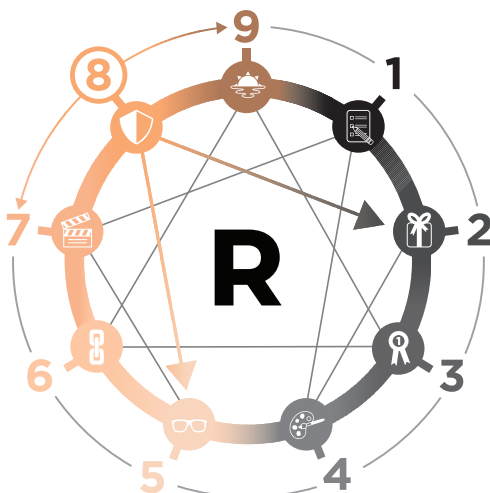

Type 8 - Understanding Your Paths

What sets the Enneagram apart from other personality tools is that it gives you the ability to navigate your internal world. The Enneagram shows you what you look like at your best, worst, and everything in between. Each Enneagram type takes on characteristics of other types in different situations. The paths below show what that looks like for you.

Type 8 - Understanding Your Wings

Wings are the Enneagram types that neighbor yours that add certain characteristics to your personality from those types. Typically, one wing is more dominant than the other, however, it is not uncommon for a person to have “balanced wings” where they take characteristics from each wing equally.

8w7 “Maverick”

Entrepreneurial in nature. Seeks adventure and experiences while leveraging their energy and strength to accomplish bigger and better things.

8w9 “Bear”

More empathetic and gentle. Still strong yet more quiet and reserved in their strength. They are more capable of slowing down and resting between their endeavors.

Leadership Style

Strengths

Motivator, influential, driven, visioneering, leader, high capacity.

Weaknesses

Hurtful, confrontational, destructive.

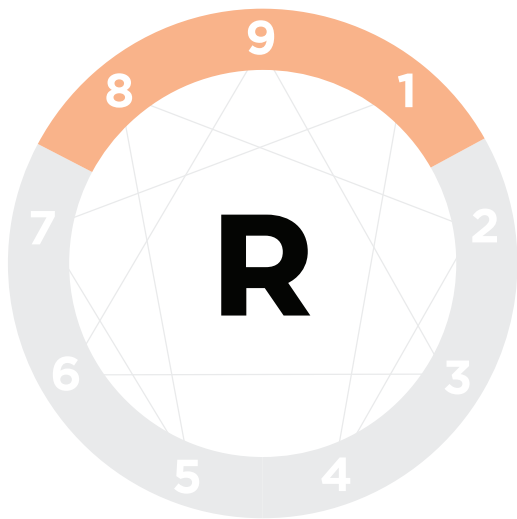

How to lead Type 8s

The Type 8 does not like to be controlled but responds well to leadership. They will seek autonomy and power so ensure they have clarity on what to accomplish then let them run. They want to hunt and at their best exist to bring home and share the spoils. If they are micro managed or controlled they will inevitably rebel or leave your team.

The Type 8 is like a fire; in one case they warm the house but can also burn the whole thing down. Do not seek to control that fire but rather harness it to serve your team and your mission.

Triads

Your triad is another way of describing how you consistently interpret and respond to life. They are also known as the "Centers Of Intelligence" and are made up of three sets of three Enneagram types. Types 2, 3, and 4 are in the heart or feeling triad, types 5, 6, and 7 are in the head or thought triad, and types 8, 9, and 1 can be found in the gut or instinct triad.

8,9,1 - Gut / Instinct Triad

Emotional Struggle - Anger

- 8 - Externalizes Anger - Seeking to protect others and maintain control the Type 8 will externalize their anger with fast and intense reactions or responses. The Type 8 will take action on their anger in order to maintain control of their environment which leads to their dominant struggle of excess.
- 9 - Avoids Anger - Anger disrupts the peace and harmony that a Type 9 longs for so they will fall asleep to or avoid their anger in order to keep the peace. This avoidance behavior leads to their dominant struggle of sloth by falling asleep to their anger or desires.
- 1 - Internalizes Anger - the Type 1 believes that anger or the expression of anger is bad so they will repress their anger which leads to being critical or judgmental. This constant repression of anger leads to their dominant struggle of resentment for themselves, their environment, or others.

Common Desire: Justice

- 8 - Does not want to be harmed or manipulated - They will take action when witnessing or experiencing an injustice for themselves, those they care about, or their environment.
- 9 - Does not want others to be overlooked or feel unimportant - They will respond to this injustice by making space for others to be seen and heard.
- 1 - Bears the burden of responsibility and believes that justice means doing the right things and being right - They will bring attention to what is wrong so it can be addressed, fixed, or improved.

Childhood Interpretations

Childhood Interpretations tell us how our type perceives or interprets life starting in childhood. We often carry this interpretation into adulthood which can lead to unhealthy or self-defeating behavior. We believe that your situations and circumstances did not make you who you are but rather your interpretation and response to those situations and circumstances created a pattern of behavior in how you approach the world. We believe that we are born with our Enneagram type, we are uniquely created with this personality type and see the world through the lens of our individual personalities. Think back to your childhood and think about how you may have viewed the world through your childhood interpretation and how you can begin leveraging this understanding moving forward.

Type 8

"It's not okay to trust or be vulnerable with anyone."

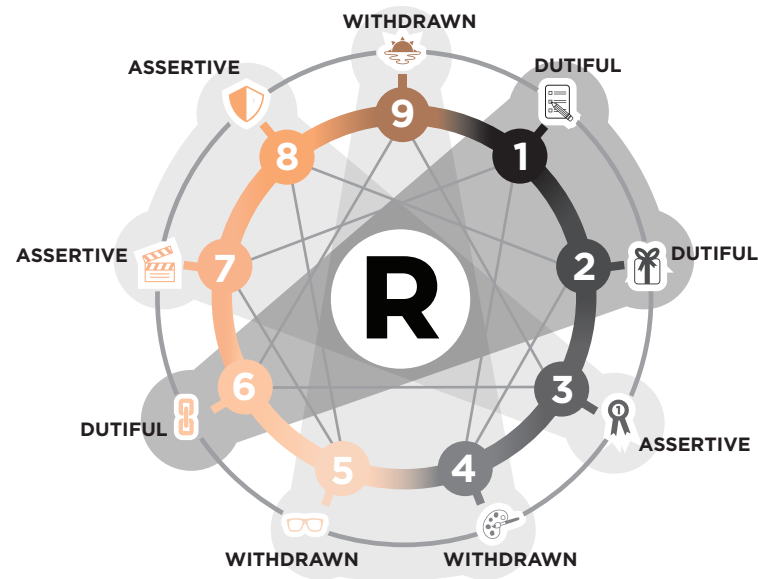

Defense Mechanisms

Defense Mechanisms are our default method of dealing with stress or stressful situations.

Type 8 - Denial

To maintain and present a strong exterior, Type 8s must deny the reality that they are vulnerable and susceptible to being harmed, controlled, and at the mercy of injustice like everyone else.

By denying weakness, they view themselves as invincible and capable to confidently control their life. They are confident because of this ability to use denial. They also deny, forget, or completely ignore unpleasant things. Type 8s may deny that they were hurtful or insensitive to others or that they were themselves hurt because they have not allowed themselves to remember or even recognize that it occurred.

Interpersonal Relationships (AKA "Stances")

This shows us how we get others to respond to us to get our needs met. There are three different interpersonal styles; Assertive, Dutiful, and Withdrawn.

Assertive Style 3,7,8

Moves against people and takes action to get what they want.

Dutiful Style 1,2,6

Moves towards people to get their needs met externally.

Withdrawn Style 4,5,9

Moves away from people and turns inward to find fulfillment.

8 - Assertive Style

- Moves against people.
- React to stress or difficulty by boosting, reinforcing, or expanding their sense of self.
- Not prone to backing down or withdrawing.
- When entering a room, they automatically infer that everything meaningful and important happening is connected to them.
- Will take control of others and situations.
- If there is a void in leadership they will naturally step in to lead.
- If there is no sense of direction or guidance they will provide it.
- Will think "mission first, feelings last."
- Will sacrifice themselves to achieve and expect others to do the same.

Navigating Conflict (AKA “Harmonic Triad”)

Each type copes or deals with conflict differently. Here is how your type deals with conflict in relation to the other enneagram types.

There are three styles for dealing with conflict:

Reactive Style 4,6,8

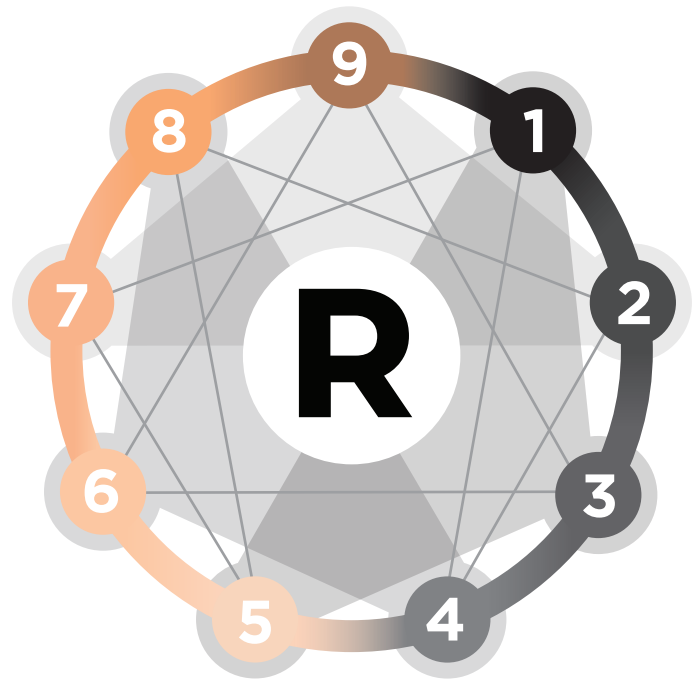

- Emotionally reactive and wants others to respond in the same way.
- Work themselves up.
- Does not trust others easily.
- Have and voice strong opinions.
- Will see those in the logical style as lacking passion and those in the optimistic style as dismissive.

Logical 1,3,5

- Emotionally detach to find and follow logical solutions.
- Seeks to remain objective in all circumstances.
- Does not want to get worked up and would rather stay calm and controlled to resolve issues.
- Will see those in the reactive style as unreasonable and those in the optimistic style as unrealistic.

Optimistic 2,7,9

- Reframe negative situations with a positive perspective.
- Consistently optimistic and see the bright side of every situation.
- Aims to create happiness and contentment for themselves and others.
- Will see those in the reactive style as angry and those in the logical style as limiting.

Type 8 Conflict Triggers

Beating around the bush, injustices that are not addressed, others lack of responsibility, lying, being blindsided, feeling betrayed.

Next Steps

1. Grow Together

Process what you are discovering with your team, spouse, or a friend to dive deeper into how this information applies to you and your life.

2. Unsure of your results?

It is not uncommon for people to mistype as personality assessments are only so accurate and sometimes we do not know ourselves as well as we think we do. Schedule a “Typing Interview” with one of our trained coaches to “confirm” your type and get the most out of your personality type.

3. Hire A Coach

You can read these results but they are incapable of reading you. It is helpful to be guided through this new information while also practically applying it to grow and accomplish your goals. We have a team of coaches that are eager to get to know you and help you as you make progress towards your goals.
