The Goal-Driven Stylist Who Builds Empires

CORE MOTIVATION IN THE SALON

> Type Threes are driven by a desire for success, recognition, and achievement. In the salon, they are the ones building clientele fastest, winning competitions, growing their brand, and always asking 'what's next?' Threes are magnetic, adaptable, and incredibly motivated.

CLIENT COMMUNICATION STYLE

- Threes adapt their communication style to match what will resonate with each client — they read the room quickly and adjust.
- They may prioritize efficiency in conversation — getting to the goal and executing beautifully — over deep emotional connection.
- Natural strength: Clients feel they are with a skilled professional who values their time and will deliver results.
- Growth edge: Slowing down to genuinely connect, not just perform connection. Clients feel the difference.

THE CONSULTATION

- Threes are great at identifying what the client wants and delivering it confidently and quickly.
- They can move too fast — skipping over important details because they want to get to the doing.
- Tip: Build in a non-negotiable pause before picking up the scissors. Ask one more clarifying question.

CREATIVITY & ARTISTRY

- Threes are often trend-forward — they know what's hot, what's winning awards, and what photographs well.
- They are motivated by recognition and may create what gets attention vs. what authentically expresses their artistic voice.
- Threes excel in competition, editorial, and platform work where achievement and visibility are celebrated.
- Encourage Threes to develop a creative POV beyond trends — what is YOUR signature?

SELF-WORTH MASTERY: MOVING FROM FIXED TO GROWTH

- Fixed pattern → Growth prompt: 'My value is my achievements — if I'm not winning or growing, I'm nothing.' → What would you be worth if you never won another award? Write that answer. That is your actual foundation — and building from there makes everything you achieve even more meaningful.
- Fixed pattern → Growth prompt: 'I'm afraid that if people see the real me — not the image — they'll be disappointed.' → Identify one thing that is genuinely, authentically true about you as a stylist that has nothing to do with your results or recognition. Share it with one client or colleague this week. Notice what happens.

- Fixed pattern → Growth prompt: 'I keep chasing the next thing because nothing ever feels like enough.' → Name the last accomplishment you genuinely celebrated — not moved past, but actually celebrated. If you can't think of one, schedule one now. Arrival matters as much as ambition.
- Fixed pattern → Growth prompt: 'I perform connection rather than feel it.' → In your next appointment, set an intention to ask one question you genuinely want to know the answer to — not to build rapport, but because you're actually curious. Notice what that feels like.
- Your growth affirmation: I am more than what I produce. My authenticity is my greatest competitive advantage — and the version of me that is genuinely known is more powerful than the version that is merely impressive.

BUILDING YOUR BUSINESS BEHIND THE CHAIR

- Threes are natural business builders — they think in terms of goals, metrics, and growth. Use this instinct deliberately.
- Build a personal brand that reflects your actual values and aesthetic, not just your most 'likable' public face. Authentic brands outperform performed ones at every time horizon.
- Set revenue targets and work backward. Threes are excellent at reverse-engineering success — calculate your ideal annual income, divide into monthly and weekly service and retail targets, then execute.
- Leverage your visibility for business growth: social media, competition results, awards, and press placements. A Three who invests in visibility early builds platforms that compound over time.
- Create signature services. Name them. Brand them. Charge a premium for them. Threes who develop a distinctive specialty become known quantities in their markets — and known quantities command premium pricing.
- Watch for: Building a business on hustle alone. Systems, processes, and team delegation allow a Three's ambition to scale beyond what one person can do behind the chair.

SELLING SERVICES & RETAIL

- Threes are typically the strongest retail sellers — they understand metrics, they're competitive, and they know how to close.
- They can sell convincingly even when they're going through the motions — watch for inauthenticity creeping in.
- Best approach: Connect retail goals to personal achievement metrics — track it, celebrate it, compete with yourself.
- Threes who believe in what they sell become excellent brand ambassadors.
- Threes love retail when it's a game — set targets, track progress, and celebrate wins.
- They can be excellent at upselling because they naturally think in terms of packages and outcomes.
- Watch for: Selling what impresses rather than what serves the client. Keep client needs central.

FEEDBACK, BOUNDARIES & TOUGH CONVERSATIONS WITH CLIENTS

- Threes handle feedback best when it is framed around performance improvement — not character critique. 'Here's how this could be even more effective' lands well. 'You're doing this wrong' lands as an attack on their identity.

- With unhappy clients: Threes can become defensive when they feel their competence is being questioned. Pause the performance instinct and enter genuine problem-solving mode — clients respond far better to authentic accountability than to polished management.
- Boundaries for Threes often involve time — they may overbooking themselves in the pursuit of achievement. Sustainable pacing is not failure; it is strategy.
- Giving feedback on the team: Threes can be so focused on the win that they give feedback in ways that feel bruising rather than building. Wrap your directness in genuine belief: 'I know you can do this — here's what I'd strengthen.'
- Tough client conversations: Threes often handle difficult conversations efficiently — but efficiency without warmth can feel cold. Slow down, make eye contact, and let the client feel heard before moving to resolution.
- Watch for: Using charm to manage rather than address difficult situations. Charm is valuable, but it doesn't replace genuine conversation.

TEAM DYNAMICS, FEEDBACK & UTILIZING YOUR GIFTS ON A SALON TEAM

- On a salon team, Threes bring incredible energy, ambition, and the contagious belief that the whole team can win. They are natural motivators who raise the vision for what's possible.
- They are excellent at leading from the front — modeling high performance, driving revenue culture, and showing what is possible when you commit.
- Natural team contribution: Sales culture, business growth conversations, motivating team performance, bringing industry energy and awareness.
- Growth edge: Learning to celebrate the team's wins as genuinely as their own. Threes can unconsciously compete rather than collaborate when they feel their status is at stake.
- Watch for: Leaving slower-moving teammates behind. The Three who builds the whole team up becomes a genuinely respected leader. The Three who outperforms everyone becomes isolated.
- Power move: Mentor a teammate who is earlier in their career. Nothing deepens a Three's authenticity faster than genuine investment in someone else's growth without personal gain.
- Threes thrive in salon cultures that celebrate achievement — give them leaderboards, goals, and public recognition and they will outperform expectations every time.

CAREER PATH ALIGNMENT

- Salon Owner / Multi-Location Owner — natural entrepreneurs who thrive building empires
- Platform Artist / Competition Stylist — visibility, awards, and industry recognition
- Brand Ambassador or Educator — representing brands, building their personal brand simultaneously
- Influencer / Content Creator — leveraging social media for visibility and business growth

STRESS & GROWTH PATHS

UNDER STRESS

Under stress (moving toward Type 9), Threes disengage, go numb, and coast. They stop striving and show up mechanically — going through the motions at the chair.

IN GROWTH

In growth (moving toward Type 6), Threes become more authentic, collaborative, and loyal. They invest in the team and connect more genuinely with clients and colleagues.

WINGS

Every type is influenced by one of its neighboring types — called a wing. While your core type remains primary, your wing adds flavor and nuance to how you show up in the salon.

3w2 — The Charmer

The 2 wing adds warmth and genuine people-orientation to the Three's ambition. These stylists build devoted followings because clients feel genuinely liked and cared for, not just serviced.

- Client Style: Charismatic, warm, results-focused. The total package — impressive AND personable.
- Selling Style: Sells from relationship AND results. Speaks to how the client will feel AND how the product performs.
- Challenge: May overextend trying to be everything to everyone. Needs to protect energy and not sacrifice quality for quantity.

3w4 — The Professional

The 4 wing adds depth, artistry, and a desire for authenticity to the Three. These stylists have a distinctive creative identity alongside their ambition — they want to be known for their art, not just their success.

- Client Style: Professional, sophisticated, creative. Clients feel they are working with a true artist who also delivers.
- Selling Style: More selective — recommends with genuine conviction. Their endorsement carries weight.
- Challenge: May struggle with feeling that the commercial side of the business compromises their artistic integrity.

YOUR GENIUS: A COSMETOLOGIST SUMMARY

GENIUS INSIGHT

Type Threes bring something rare and essential to the cosmetology profession: the drive to build something real, the ambition to grow beyond the ordinary, and the magnetism to bring clients along for the ride. In an industry where so many talented stylists remain invisible, a Three's commitment to visibility and excellence is a genuine gift — to themselves, their team, and the clients who find them. The growth edge is intimacy: the willingness to be truly known rather than merely impressive. When a Three allows their authentic self to be seen — when the image and the person begin to match — they become something more than successful. They become significant. And significance, unlike success, is what clients remember for decades.
